Okay, I see you in another posting of articles. You are reading the Blue Planet Seas of Life Coral Seas Worksheet Answers with the address of the link Episode 2 of the planet Blue II is centered around "The Deep World, a largely unknown world of cold and total brutal of darkness. The waters that fill the deep ocean form in small areas restricted from the ocean near the mouths, where surface waters become dense enough (via salinity of cooling and greater) to sink into the abyss. These sunken waters thus form the limbs of the downwelling of the circulation system of the deep ocean flowing throughout the ocean. The sinking happens in a spectral and restricted areas of the north polar and southern ocean atleave. The deep water that is formed in the north polar atlantic is referred to as deep water water (NADW), while in the South Ocean it is referred to as anthrhal bottom water (AABW). These water masses are commonly distinguished by their contrasting temperatures and salinities, as you can see from the figure below the distribution of salinity throughout the Atlantic Ocean. The sink of these waters of the polar surface for the abyss is essential for almost all marine animals, because these deep-formed deep waters are responsible à € à €
