"Hotaru no hikari" is played in many school graduation ceremonies, and at the end of the New Year's show NHK KÅ Haku Uta Gassen. It obvious associations of the song and its melody have made a common basis for the cinematic soundtracks from the first days of "talking" of the photos to the present - a large number of films and television series that used episodes For the background, generally but without any exclusively to evoke the new year. Notable performance Frank C. Stanley (1868-1910) The recordings The first recording of the song was made on the wax cylinder in 1898 by the English Charles Samuel Myers and Alfred Cort Hadden, who sang in a demonstration of the new technology while on an expedition To record Aboriginal Australian music with figures including Charles Seligman, WH R rivers and Sidney Herbert Ray. The original 1898 recording can be heard online via the British Library Sound Archive website. [37] The first commercial recording was probably Frank C Stanley, who recorded the song in 1907 (which can be heard above). As a standard in music, since then "Auld Lang Syne" has been recorded many times, in every conceivable style, by many artists, both known and obscure. Live and Broadcast 1929: Guy Lombardo and his Canadi Royal performed it on New Year's Eve for decades until his death in 1977. Several sources believed lombardo with "divulge" the use of the song, at least in the United States. The 1947 Decca record version of Lombardo is played in Times Square every new year following the fall of the ball. [38] 1997: on June 30, the day before Hong Kong was handed over from the United Kingdom to the People's Republic of China, the melody was interpreted by the bands of silver and tubes of the Royal Hong Kong Police Force, at the start of the 28th of Hong Kong and last British governor, Chris Patten, from his official residence, House of the Government, Hong Kong. [39] 2009: on November 30 â USt. Andrew's Day - Students and staff at the University of Glasgow sang the song was performed by a woodcut from the contingent tubes of the Gurkha of the Singapore Police Force and the Istana battery platoon as a form of respect to the late Prime Minister of Singapore, Mr. Lee Kuanduring his state funeral.
