Killing Eve, starring Sandra Oh and Jodie Comer, first premiered in 2018. In January 2020, BBC renewed the spy thriller for season 4. Jodie is nominated for best actress in a drama television series at the 2021 Golden Globes. Here's exactly how to watch and stream Killing Eve on TV. If you're on the hunt for a new show to watch, give Killing Eve a try — we promise, you will not regret it. The critically acclaimed spy drama centers around M16 operative Eve Polastri (Sandra Oh) and assassin Villanelle (Jodie Comer). The two end up in a thrilling cat-and-mouse game after Eve is assigned to track down Villanelle. Ready to see what all the buzz is about? Here's all the info you need before you start watching the hit show. Where to watch Killing Eve on TV. If you already have a cable provider that supports access to BBC America (for example, Spectrum, Fios and DirectTV) you can use your cable login to watch the show on demand along with the option to livestream episodes on BBCAmerica.com. Thankfully, options for watching the show on cable have been growing. Killing Eve is also now on AMC in order to help boost its profile. Just like with BBC America, you'll need to sign in with your cable provider login to access the series. You can also sign up for AMC Premiere if the network is part of your TV package. How to Stream Killing Eve: Killing Eve No cable? No problem. While Killing Eve is currently not on Netflix, you can watch seasons 1, 2, and 3 on Hulu (if you don't have Hulu, you can sign up for a month-long trial for free). The show is also available on iTunes, Sling, Roku, Google Play, YouTube/YouTube TV, and Amazon (FYI, just like Hulu, you can sign up for a free month of Prime). Killing Eve starring Sandra Oh and Jodie Comer is one of the BBC's most successful and recognisable shows at present, with a host of award nominations and wins to boast of. The show's fans will be pleased to know a fourth season is on the way, although for the drama was delayed due to the coronavirus pandemic. Killing Eve season 4: When's it on TV? Killing Eve season 4 is currently in production, a clip peppered with behind the scenes snippets revealed that the fourth series was now in production. The team are holding exact details of the new series close to their chest, but the internet exploded after a brief appearance of what could be Sandra Oh as Eve Polastri dressed in a short blonde wig. She seems to be standing in front of Tower Bridge in London. This content is imported from Twitter. You may be able to find the same content in another format, or you may be able to find more information, at their web site. Deadline reported that filming was due to start in August 2020 but there were delays caused by the pandemic. According to Deadline, the main reason for the delay is because Killing Eve is "a jigsaw of European location shoots, many of which have been rendered difficult at this time due to the pandemic." A spokesperson for the show said: "Killing Eve shoots across multiple European locations. Due to the uncertainty of the world as a result of Covid-19, no shooting schedules for Killing Eve season four have been locked in at this point and there are various scenarios in play. Star of the series Fiona Shaw told AP that filming was due to start in autumn 2020 but now won't commence until June 2021, commenting that will give them longer days to shoot and hopefully, more access to travel. BBC Watch this space for confirmation from the BBC when we have it. Killing Eve season 4: Who's in it? We do know that Sandra Oh and Jodie Comer will be back as Eve Polastri and Villanelle, after season three saw them survive the drama and bloodshed. Fiona Shaw will return as Carolyn Martens, along with her daughter Geraldine (Gemma Whelan). Sadly, we know Carolyn's endearing son Kenny (Sean Delaney) won't be back, after his tragic death at the start of the third series. It's also highly likely we'll see Kim Bodnia return as Konstantin, as he managed to emerge from season three alive, although not particularly well. BBC One character who wasn't quite so lucky in series three was Dasha (Harriet Walter) and it seems there's no chance of a resurrection for the former assassin. "She was written to be dead in the script. She's dead... They may find a way to resurrect her in season four, but yeah, the way we wrote it, the intention was: her heart stopped. She's gone. She's left us," season three writer and executive producer Suzanne Heathcote told TV Line. As per previous series, expect to see new characters (and famous faces) joining the show. Behind the scenes, Laura Neal will act as head writer for the fourth season. "Killing Eve smashes television tropes in every way, both on the screen and behind it," said AMC's Sarah Barnett following the announcement. "We have a remarkable squad of ferociously smart women writers passing the baton to each other on this show, aligned around a coherent vision but bringing it to life with their own specific sparkle and brilliance. Laura Neal is the latest incredible leader of the pack on Killing Eve." Killing Eve season 4: What's it about? During a BAFTA Q&A, Suzanne Heathcote teased that the writers overseeing season four will "take it somewhere new, which involves taking risks. You just can't tread water". But we don't know exactly what's coming down the track. In the final scene of season three, it was hinted that Eve and Villanelle might be choosing to stay together rather than each going solo, so perhaps in series four we'll see their relationship develop in a way that's different to what we've been used to seeing. BBC Konstantin's motives and alliances are still very much a mystery, so it's likely the next series will explore that further. Not to mention, The Twelve are still at large and killing a lot of people. Will Carolyn be able to stop them? For now, we'll have to wait and see... Killing Eve airs on BBC One. If you've been missing a particular Russian blonde assassin with a great sense of fashion and absolutely no remorse, fret not: Killing Eve is back for a third season, and things are going to be extra tense after Villanelle (Jodie Comer) shot Eve in Italy after Eve rejected her. Sandra Oh is back as Eve Polastri (Killing Eve wouldn't actually kill Eve), along with the rest of the gang, which includes the head of M16 Carolyn (Fiona Shaw), her son Kenny (Sean Delaney), and Villanelle's handler and M16 informant Konstantin (Kim Bodnia). Considering the direction things went in season 2, some wonder if Niko (Owen McDonnell) is still in the picture. After all, Villanelle murdered his new girlfriend Gemma (Anna Thornton-Wilton) and left him for dead in a storage locker. And poor Hugo! Hugo (Edward Bluemel) gets shot in the hallway of the hotel he and Eve are staying in. She leaves him to go find help but when she gets back, he's gone. Sadly, it looks like Bluemel won't be returning to the show.If you're just dying (sorry not sorry) to learn which characters are back the third season (which premiered April 12 on CTV), along with newcomers, read on. Actually, good things can happen in quarantine, and Sandra Oh and Jodie Comer just proved it. While I'm sitting on my ass all day eating frozen pizzas and dreaming of fresh air, BBC America was scheming. They decided to bring us the third season of Killing Eve a whole two weeks early on April 12, and dropped the official trailer to prove it. Suddenly, weeks with nothing but my TV as a companion does not seem so bad.The new trailer answers one of the biggest questions left hanging after the season 2 finale: Did Villanelle (Comer) really kill Eve (Oh)? Of course not — but she thinks she did."I just had a really bad breakup," Villanelle says in the trailer. "When I think about my ex I realize I am so much happier now she's dead."But Villanelle's hot girl summer is interrupted by some news."Eve is alive," Konstantin (Kim Bodnia) drops, prompting Villanelle to scream. But Eve isn't having the best time either. Drinking wine on the street, shoveling cereal into her mouth in the supermarket, and cleaning herself using a public bathroom sink — actually, sounds like normal post-breakup behavior to me.The season 3 press release also hints at a "shocking and personal death" that brings the two women back together, so start bracing yourself now.Writer Suzanne Heathcote is bringing the third installment of the beloved Phoebe Waller-Bridge series to our screens, and it has already been renewed for season 4. New episodes will be aired on CTV on April 12 at 9 p.m. ET. Killing Eve's first three seasons introduced viewers to Eve and Villanelle's cat-and-mouse drama. And in February, the series returns for its fourth and final chapter, which once again stars Sandra Oh and Jodie Comer. But there's still time to catch up if you're unfamiliar with the series. (Because chilly winter temperatures means conditions are ideal for a weekend spent binge-watching.)Here's how to tune in.How to Watch Killing Eve on TV:If you already have a traditional cable subscription, you're likely in luck. For many providers, seasons one, two, and three of Killing Eve is currently available on demand.
