Photo Courtesy: Rainer Stropek/Flickr It's tempting to believe you know all about your furry friend(s), feline(s). However, it is likely to be wrong. From the history and biological anatomy to your behavioral patterns, there's a lot to know about cats. Cats are not only our fur companions, but also amazing animals by right themselves. Some like to swim in hot waters, while others have hairy ears to help them travel through the snow. The only thing right about them is they still have a lot to learn. The cat in SpaceHumans does not have the monolith of the outer space. In 1963, the French launched fée licette - one of more than a number of cats chosen and trained for a mission in outer space - on a suborbital flight that lasted about thirteen minutes. Photo Courtesy: freakwave /Pixabay The information gathered by this brave kitten astronaut helped scientists better understand gravitational effects and atmospheric re-entry. Unfortunately, fée licette was euthanized just a few months after her incredible space travel, since scientists wanted to study her brain rebro. That fée licette have a time of peace in the paraso of cats. It is well known that people can develop allergies to cats. But did you know that cats can develop allergies to their owners? More specifically, felines may develop asthma or upper respiratory tracts after spending long periods with smokers or those who like to use too much perfume. Photo courtesy: Iltar/Pixabay Cats can also develop allergies in a house that contains a lot of pollen, mold, paint or aerosol products. Yes, it is important to remember that a cat lung is much smaller, and therefore much less capable, than a human lung. Say no to the pollutants - for yourself and your cat! Your saliva can be dangerous. CatJapan train station alone seems to love cats as much as the rest of the internet. Hello. In order to have an entire island literally full of cats, the country also m had the only feline master of the train station. Associated with witchcraft, black magic and good luck, they have been massacred and persecuted since the Mother Age. day. Even today, people in many cultures fear the vision of a black cat and consider it a sign of news. Photo Courtesy: Nikita/Flickr However, some people in Great Britain and Ireland are more likely to rejoice at the vision of a black cat, since it is believed that they bring good luck in ancient British cultures. In Germany, a black cat can be good or bad, depending on the direction it is walking. Weird, no? Cat Taste BudsCats sure seem to have a taste for things like meat and fish, but sweet food, not so much. Thus, the receptors for 152Magnum' are much less pronounced and active than in human languages. Photo Courtesy: peace duveamlady/Pixabay While you can enjoy a sweet chocolate bar, the chances are, your feline friend won't! Feeding sweet animals is usually a terrible idea anyway, like most cats and dogsHello? Chocolate allergies. Hello. I mean, your cat can't. Try the cat. Everybody knows cats go crazy for fennel. At least most of them. Approximately one third of the world population of domestic cats stics don't react in the least to catnip. Their bodies do not contain the gene that allows them to translate the aroma and taste of the plant into psychotropic madness. Photo Courtesy: katieb50/Flickr However, if your tiny kitten is not responding to catnip, it may be worth giving it some time. Most of the cats have no reaction to the green material at all that they meet at least six months old. Are there many people out there who believe that cat memes started with I Can Haz Cheezburger? But the truth is much more surprising. People have looked at cats and thinking, henceforth, how much fun! Are Glasses. Possibly since the beginning of Western civilization. Photo Courtesy: Karen Arnold/PublicDomainPictures Photography of this passion first appeared during the end of the season 18th century and beginning of sugar 19th century with stylized pictures of cats dressed as people while doing human things like cooking, hanging out with friends and sitting down to dinner. Although these images seem a little strange today, Stilltown's standards, they are some of the first cats'memes. Intercourse Panful This topical a little disgusting, by is so, if you think you're easily disgusted, you might want to roll down now. For those of you with stronger feelings, enquiring into the weaker imagination or imagination, there is little question about cat genitalia. Yeah, like you give a shit. Nevertheless, male cats have genitals formed exclusively covered with small splinters. Photo Courtesy: tevenet/Pixabay When they get involved with Furmea cat, these barbs scrap the interior of the figure, causing it to ovule. Honestly, that looks horrible. Fortunately, we have developed a much more friendly approach for reproducing and sexual relationships. A lot. Mount. The human body contains many bones now! more when we are younger than when we are older, believe it or not! People are born with about 270 bones, but by the time they became adults, this number withered only 206. Photo Courtesy: Internet Archive Book Images/Wikimedia Commons Overall, adult cats beat adult humans at bone number 24. Part of this number is an extra set of ribs not found in humans, of tail bones. Just because an animal doesn't mean its skeleton is complex! Taking the Big Dip While most home cats are afraid of water and cream in general, there are many species of big cats who like to go for a dip from time to time. Some of the biggest cats, such as the Bengal, the Turkish Van and the savannah cat, like to go to the water. Photo Courtesy: Wildfaces/Pixabay Biologists theorize that many aquatically oriented felines swim because they have an instinctive need to avoid extreme heat, and to keep cool easy in a lake or lake. In addition addition, Environmental Environmental Benefits While you're swimming, you can catch some fish for lunch! The little SpacesCatiente undertakes to continue to live claustrophobia. They look for small places and put themselves in there in for better or for worse. This seems to be a security-related behavior. Cats feel safer when they are in tight and hidden spaces or when they are in most of the house's mobiles, supervising everyone around them. Photo Courtesy: alisdair/Flickr This why cats once needed to protect themselves from danger as they slept. Because they sleep so often they need a safe place to snugg. Usually, this means the laundry basket. Weggen and Turned them into Permanent BabiesCats Donece Cats with other wild cats. Even domesticated stray cats only when they are Or talk to humans. Opening your mouth and leaving the tongue It does not look like a great way to cool to humans, but it helps both cats and dogs. All Sleepour fuzzy feline fellow can spend until half of their lives sleeping. During a typical day, a cat can spend until 30% of your time at rest. Of course, anyone can sleep half of the day if I had someone feeding, loving and taking care of them all the time. Photo Courtesy: Andrea Castelli / Flickr from a biological point of view, cats sleep with more frequency during the day and in the middle of the night. They tend to be more active at dusk and dawn. This habit developed as a way to avoid larger and more frightening predators. Markshave that you have already looked at a pair of and he thought they seemed Cat claws? If the answer is yes, you think a lot with a Hugar. Instead of calling them a cutting, the Hancels call them cat claws. It makes a lot of sense when you think about it. Abraham Lincoln loved cats, while Freddie Mercury dedicated entire rooms from her mansion to her hairy friends. Ernest Hemingway and John Lennon had a special affection for kittens. Photo Courtesy: The history by rafters / Youtube It's also important to notice that some of the greatest dictators in history despised cats. Adolf Hitler, Benito Mussolini, Napoleon Bonaparte, and Ghengis Khan are all known as "cat-haters." They can jump, they can jump and can jump away as minimal panthers. Many domestic rods can jump up to 6 times your height, which translates into about 12 feet for some cats! Photo Courtesy: Rihaj / Pixabay Your amazing jumping capacity and your rattle reflections are the result of past military in search of prey. Although they may not know, this colorful tuft of feathers at the tip of a stick is a representation of the animals that the ancestors of a cat have hunted. Very cool, huh? Half The Day Cleaningcats can spend half day sleeping, this is true. But it is probably that they place the other half of their day to clean themselves. The felines tend to be fastidiously hygienic, and that is why they often share their litter box with another cat. Photo Courtesy: OLID56 / Pixabay Because cats spend so much time cleaning up alone, and because most of them are covered in pallet, the pallet balls can become a common issue for some kittens. This sickness is especially common in cats with longer and heavy coat. Owners should be aware that daily brushing and adequate nutritional care may decrease the occurrence of pallet balls. Whiskers Aren't Just for Lookswhiskers may be the equivalent of a beard for cats, but to the contrary of humans, are more than a mere facial decoration. Cats depend on their mustaches to give them know the space around you, a kind of motion-sensitive antenna. If a cat mustache is damaged or cut, theyexperience little stability and motion control. Photo courtesy: Ian Barbour/Flickr It can be excruciating for a cat to have its whiskers cut off, so it's absolutely vital to avoid doing so at any time. Whiskers fall naturally and replace over time, so let nature do its job.ColorblindnessCats don't see things in black and white, but experience a very different view of the world. Unlike most humans, cats have difficulty seeing colors like red or pink. In addition, the shades of green and blue that they perceive are much less saturated and robust in compared to the shades that people see. Photo Courtesy: Apantig/Wikimedia Commons A bright, grassy slope may look brown to a cat, while a striking blue dog may be grey. Interestingly, cats are also mApes, which means that humans can see farther, and more clearly, than their kittens homologous.Free CollarbonesThe family cat can find itself in a precarious position when exploring through the refrigerator, washing or drying machine. Persistent meow usually lets owners know that something is happening. However, the question quickly becomes the first place as cat has ended up at that location. Photo Courtesy: Andrey/Flickr The answer, most of the time, are the collarbones. A cat's collaris is not connected to the rest of its system. In reality very flexible in compared to most parts of the anatomy. This allows cats to squeeze into any space the same size as their clavula. They can taste smells When a cat opens its mouth for a few seconds and makes a face as if it smells something horrible, it may be doing just that, except ten times worse. Cats can taste the air for odors, and particularly strong odors produce that smelly face with open mouth on felines. Photo burak kostak/Pexels This is just one more reason to be more sensitive to the experiences and needs of your kitten. Although he may not realize the force of his deodorant or colon, his cat will certainly not notice. The same rule For refreshing air and cooking exotics. Although the languages gem with human language, which is slippery and smooth, the language of a cat and sandpophery. This is due to the rows and rows of raised papillae, similar to column covering the language. While it may seem rude to have a spine-covered language, it suits the needs of cats as well. Photo Courtesy: Jennifer Leigh / Wikimedia Commons Papillae help a cat clean up more thoroughly, which is since cats can spend a huge part of their lives cleaning themselves up. In nature, these flesh peaks also help felines lick every last piece of flesh and tissue from the bones of a prey. The pawjust preferred as humans, cats have a preference - you use to pick things up. A cat may be entitled - pawned or left, but unlike people - who mostly do things with the right hands - the division is quite among the feline population. Photo Courtesy: Lisa Zins / Flickr This 50/50 situation arises from a very peculiar pattern. Most female cats tend to stay for sure, while most male cats tend to be left with the left. However, there is still no so-called theory as to why the desgAnixia of passion between male and female cats has developed. Maybe it's a forgotten dry sexual character, but this seems unlikely.The truth behind the owners of snoring cats think their cats purrs because they are happy and comfortable. While this is most of the time, it is not the case for each cat. Some cats purr when frightened or extremely sick. Photo Courtesy: Jeffrey Wainwright / Flickr Think of it this: Have you whistled a happy tune while you were afraid or sad to try to stand up? Cats purr for themselves for comfort in stressful situations as well as this! My name that it is a substantial amount of that shows that cats know their names. However, some cat names are more successful than others. Names that end with an "on" or an "o" or an "o" or "e" tend to be more effective than others, although more data is needed for a solid conclusion about it. Photo courtesy: Ramiz DedakoviOA,Unsplash Cats may recognize their names, but they may also choose to ignore it. You can call a cat for ten minutes and receive nothing but shake a treatment back and bam Baam! Deep Places is a cat. The power of food, people. Body language is important when making a new knowledge, speaking with a colleague or manager or usually trying to make a good impression, body language is essential. Cross-arms and furtive eyes are not a good omen for a potential employee and can cause a candidate to miss an opportunity. Photo Courtesy: Marko Blazevic/Pexels Cats work the same way. They read people and each other for physical signs of how that person or animal may be feeling. Body language is also the main way cats communicate with their owners besides pissing, of course. A raised tail, slightly curve almost always means, to the left Hello there! There are some hilarious stories of families that ended up adopting a clepto kitten. Some cats, especially those who lived some difficulties where food was scarce, like stealing things. Car keys, money, jewelry, plastic or anything else that catches your eyes can end up in a secret treasure somewhere. Photo Courtesy: images/Pixabay Unfortunately, children are often blamed for the thefts performed by domestic cats. Itin~~~~en is usually only during a movement or a complete house cleaning that parents can find a secret stack of cat items Always clean under the couch! They're a little angel that gets a lot of credit for being smart. However, although it is easier to teach a dog to sit, roll and pretend dead than it would be to try to teach a cat any of these things, which does not necessarily mean that cats are less intelligent than catsPhoto Courtesy: Karen Arnold/PublicDomainPictures Both species are able to learn and Aham-152; using hundreds, if not thousands of words.
