When that disastrous time strikes and you must use the backup site, ASR lets you fail over to the secondary site. The tutorial will be using a prefix of RSV, then the resource group name based on an organizational requirement. Since this tutorial will be demonstrating cross-region replication, choose No here.Availability Zones eÂÂÂ This option is greyed out if you choose No for the previous setting. VMs are not actually created until the failover completes. Enabling virtual machines Scrolling down the page a bit, youeÂÂÂAll see the Replication Policy. Now, provide details for creating the ASR vault and click Review + Create. 5. 2. Click On Enable replication, as shown below. Choosing Yes here tells ASR to replicate the VMs into the same region. Selecting virtual machines 5. recovery services vault created Enabling Replication (Site Recovery) Once youeÂÂÂAve created a vault, iteÂÂÂÂs time to configure it by enabling replication, or what the Azure refers to as Site Recovery. The vault contains settings of how the replication will occur and monitors the replication as iteÂÂÂÂs happening. These writes are processed and then sent to your selected region for failover.The vault processes the local storage data and sends it to a storage account created by ASR or managed disks in the destination region.Every five minutes, ASR creates crash-consistent recovery points. App-consistent snapshots capture disk activity, data in memory, and any transactions in process to capture the entire state of a VM. Click into the search bar, as shown below, type recovery, and click on Recovery Service Vaults to open the ASR vault page. On the ASR vault page, click Create. Now, provide all of the necessary configuration settings to enable replication. Planning Your Site Recovery: Tutorial Overview Before you can begin using ASR for your Azure disaster recovery needs, must must first create a recovery plan. After a few minutes, you will notice the deployment is complete. Source Location eÂÂÂ The Azure region where the VMs currently are located.Azure virtual machine deployment model eÂÂÂ The method that Azure will use to deploy VMs to the backup site upon failover. Automation Account eÂÂÂ This setting is for any automation account youeÂÂÂAd like for ASR Vault will be opened and a replication options will be displayed. To create the ASR vault: 1. This tutorial will be using the West United Kingdom. What Is Azure Site Recovery? You will also see a warning in Failover Health (shown below), this indicates that a test failover has not yet been performed. Â Checking the Status of the Replication After you don't enable the replication, it Â Â A instead, choose Resource Manager Source Subscription ÂÂ The subscription you do not want to use with this tutorial.Source resource group Â ÂÂÂ If you don't Â plan to learn how to failover the site, be sure to clear ASR resources. Resource GroupÂ Create a new resource group for the vault or supply an existing one. RegionÂ Provide the target region from which you will fail over the site. 1. 7. Name of the safeÂ Give the safe a friendly name of your choice. In this example, leave this setting as in Allow ASR to manage. Aren't you curious to see what Azure Site Recovery can do?
