Collecting ant specimens mini ielts reading answers

Ielts reading answer collecting ant specimens.

As a dry leaf lacquer above, ants (and other animals) move down and eventually fall into the bottom and are collected in lcool placed below the funnel. The plastic tubes with insurance tops are better than the glass because they are lighter, and do not break so easily spotted. As some sports are largely nocturnal, the collection should not be confined for days. The preservative used is usually ethylene glycol or propylene glycol, since the alcohol will evaporate rapidly and the traps dry. The diar of the traps can range from about 18 mm to 10 cm and the number used may vary from some to several hundreds. When possible, collections must be made of nests or forage columns and at least 20 to 25 individuals collected. Plastic tubes with insurance tops are better than the glass because they are lighter, and do not break so easily spotted. Answer: C 7 abcd is a good method for spies that are difficult to find. A trap of traps can be any small container placed on the ground with the upper level with the surrounding surface and filled with a preservative. To collect the wide range of possible species, several monthly all should be used. The exact method used will depend on the ultimate goal of collections.
