Á ¢ The conjunctive characterizes both profound emotion and impersonal statements, to say sea Á ± now VÁfÁ;squeeze, standing in its class among the WORKS OF WORK Guatemalan, or MUA Á ± ECAS QUITAPENAS, which hang from its ceiling. Wrapped in wires intertwined in pink, green, blue, orange horizontal and, dolls listen as if ± now shows us a PowerPoint presentation. Expressions Á ¢ Impersonale, a sea Á ± now continues. At Eng s well that, ita s interesting that, it's bad that. Emotion is separate, it is not attached to the speaker.Á ¢ like floating pollen in the air, away from yellow, wet flower. The subjunctive reminds me of how my father speaks. Surely, the disease of him doesn't make excitement of feeling emotion. He is just unable to express the feeling that he feels and sticks for the subjunctive phrases that detach it from perception. Á ¢ s well that, it's bad that, ita s interesting thatÁ ¢ | Like Sea Á ± now teaches, I realize that IÁ ¢ m blocked to the subjunctive, too. It is most commonly conjunctive unreal situations of hope, desire, and desire, one says. LAS MUA Á ± ECA sway as a breeze enters the classroom window. Spanish classrooms were pushed in low-cost laptops outside, but sea Á ± now it is right. She likes the wind and the sun. Á, for example, I would like, I feel, please God That ¢ | Á ¢ sea Á ± Now continue to go with your list of the same sentences I find myself thinking every time I look forward to my fatherÁ ¢ s. At first it was one I pray that his condition is not as serious as the doctor says.Á ¢ then, I feel like this disease is taking my fatherÁ ¢ filter through his brain as honey, leaving Slowly a sugar residue to corrode his mind and make a great cavity. And finally, I would like you to have something more easy to help you demement.Á ¢ For our birthdays, SRA. VÁ;queeze gives us every ± a small MUA. We whisper our conjunctive dreams at night dolls, slide under our pillow, and the hope that she says about morning knowledge. But the knowledge and pieces of paper and fabric did not start for dementia, tearing through the seams as you stand between me and my father. I thought the gap between us was the result of our age. Ia M 16. My father is 50. Perhaps the technological and social gap was, finally, too vast for us we understand. Then my father has forgotten the words to describe time, he could no longer have any animated conversations, and he lost himself at airports after traveling the country for years. I understood the disconnection was a cellular level of the brain cells and nerves. Today, I have an English newspaper in my backpack on the symbology of light and in the dark in Romeo and Juliet. I bring to my father, not wanting praise, but a conversation. Maybe he'll see my card and ask me what it was, how long it took me to write four beautifully artisan pages on Shakespeare s jokes. Á, I got a + on my English card, I say to him. I set my backpack on the stool in our granite-aligned kitchen and walk to the sofa on which Dada s watch ESPN. Basketball players in Yellow Pullover Notre Dame enter the screen after the interval. Á, thatÁ ¢ s good, my father says. There he is. The subjunctive, impersonal sea expressions Á ± now speaks, my á ¢
