First hour, the technology used to appear complex and would require a great quantity of skills to manage the available solutions. Today, we have the technology applicable in the simplest human activities as intelligent products with intelligent algorithms that produce them while they make error-free judgments and provide intelligent and analytical solutions. Does the technology have all the answers? This article from Credit Suisse, tells us that technology does not have all the answers because it was found to show "prejudice prejudice, Ã ¢ â‚¬" as humans. No one can discredit the impact of technology, but it is not totally devoid of human inputs and this is the reason why we live these prejudices in many areas we have the technology that holds the foot. It also emphasizes the importance of having women on product development teams. This approach is not sure to eliminate all forms of prejudice, but it's a good way to start to evaluate the full benefits of technology. Technology as a connection tooltechnology so far has been an important connection tool between us humans. It is used and appreciated by everyone, regardless of breed, language and sex. In order to keep it less subjective to these topics on human prejudices, I believe we should collect opinions on products and solutions before making them available to the public. This could be done by collecting input from expected target users and receiving feedback through production phases. Ã ¢ â‚¬ The problem is a start ", it will depend on inclusive technologies that meet this vast market not exploited." This cannot be more apt especially at a time when we look at technology for solutions. We should not eat our progress with battling bias algorithm technology.
